TORA URUP

the Sun the Moon

the Sun the Moon

Galerie Maria Wettergren is pleased to present the solo exhibition the Sun the Moon by Tora Urup, introducing new poetic sculptures in hand-shaped solid glass and Japanese Urushi lacquer by the Danish artist. Urup is fascinated by rotation, a phenomenon central to the physical realization of her glass sculptures, but equally relevant to all movement in our universe, determined by gravity. This dynamic rather than static state is not only characterized by the glass objects themselves, but equally engaged by their viewers, moving around the sculptures to observe their changing expressions. In the words of the artist, “My work is a game of seeing and perceiving. A game that challenges our senses and our perception of space and reality.”

Tora Urup has been experimenting with hand-applying colored Japanese lacquer directly on glass since a research trip to Japan in 2017, where she learned about the traditional Urushi technique, and explored the contrast between the materials as well as their inherent qualities. While Urup establishes some rules in her process, she also allows the unexpected nature of the materials to come into play. The dynamic between control and chance is an intriguing part of the process.

The Urushi lacquer is made with the sap from trees, and thus is an organic, “living” material with a completely different visual quality to glass. While the solid glass reflects the light in multiple ways, the Japanese Urushi lacquer absorbs it, creating a feeling of infinite depth. By uniting these contrasting principles in the same object, Urup creates a vibrating feeling of dynamics related to our perception of light and shadow, transparency/opacity, space/surface, void/solid, illusion/form, light/heavy, cold/warm.

The exhibition equally includes examples of Urup’s earlier iconic works, such as the circular “Multilayers” and “Sky Reflections” in vibrant colors of thin opaque and thick transparent glass. These bodies of work reflect Urup’s initial investigations into the specific role played by color and material in our perception of volume and space and reveal the artist’s interest in altering archetypes like the glass bowl into dreamlike objects. By combining subtle colors and making them interplay with each other by varying the glass thickness, Urup enables new spatial perceptions that reverse our conventional understanding of the traditional glass bowl. The interior volumes of these trompe l’oeil sculptures seem to float independently of their exterior, and by the careful juxtaposition and treatment of cut, polished and matt-brushed surfaces, she creates a genuine illusion of a seemingly infinite and liquid space inside a physically restrained volume.

Tora Urup started her career working with ceramic art in Tokoname, Japan in 1982-83, after which she studied glass and ceramics at the School of Applied Arts of Copenhagen in Denmark. In 1994, she graduated from the Royal College of Art in London and subsequently returned to Denmark to collaborate with Holmegaard Glassworks and Royal Copenhagen porcelain. Since 2001, Tora Urup has been running her own design studio and produced her works in collaboration with highly skilled craftsmen in Europe and Japan.

Tora Urup's artworks are part of important museum collections such as The François Pinault Collection, Paris, France; The Museum of Art and Design, Helsinki, Finland; the MUDAC, Lausanne, Switzerland; The Craft and Design Museum, Reykjavik, Iceland; Coburg Glass Museum, Germany; The Art Council, Copenhagen, Denmark; Kunstforeningen af 14 August, Denmark; The Glass Museum, Ebeltoft, Denmark and the Designmuseum Danmark.

“ In Japan, urushi lacquer is known for the perfect smooth surfaces, but my mission goes in a different direction. Just as I want to emphasize the special nature of the glass material, it is interesting to find out what characterizes urushi and to make the two materials play together. I leave traces of brushstrokes and dust grains in the urushi lacquer, giving it an interesting character that plays with the light in different ways. ”

“ I have been experimenting for several years with applying colored Japanese lacquer directly to glass. The two materials are very different and the contrast between them is interesting. The lacquer is an organic sap, derived from trees, a “living” material with a completely different visual quality than glass. ”

“ When the viewer moves around the object, different expressions are experienced. The reflections of the glass are changed by the surrounding light, space and direction, and by the meeting between the reflecting, transparent glass and the mat lacquered surface. ”
